REASON FOR ALLOWANCE

1. Weber discloses a coupler arm assembly comprising a knuckle that is pivotally connected to the coupler head, a solenoid disposed about an outer periphery of the coupling frame for applying a magnetic force to move the pin, a second device including a lever arm pivotally coupled to the coupler frame. Adams discloses a railway car coupler including a knuckle coupler pivotally mounted to the head, a chamber containing an actuating mechanism which is connected to a thrower-lock assembly for moving the knuckle to a disengaged position. Long discloses a linkage actuator for a coupler knuckle assembly of a railway passenger car which is mounted on the coupler head directly adjacent to the knuckle-assembly which linkage-actuator does not extend along the shank connecting the knuckle assembly to the car. A rotatable operating rod used for placing the knuckle into its lock-set or fully open position is actuated by a pivotal plate mounted on top of the coupler head. One end of the plate is urged into its non-actuated, horizontal position by a spring while the other end of the plate is connected to an eccentric cam that is coupled to the rotatable actuating rod of the knuckle assembly. Haefner et al disclose a trailer coupling with at least one load cell for measuring traction forces, pressure forces an/or supporting forces present between a tracting vehicle and a trailer, wherein the load cell comprises a piston acting on a pressure sensor and disposed in a pot-like housing and forming an annular gap filled with an elastomeric material. However, none of the references of record suggests an assembly for connecting railway cars wherein an anvil, slidably connected to said second railway car is capable of pushing against a vertical shaft of a male part, a knuckle, pivotally connected to said second railway car, together with said anvil, are capable of surrounding and restraining said vertical shaft of said male part in a plane perpendicular to said vertical shaft, whereby a receptacle, capable of surrounding and restraining said horizontal shaft of said male part in a plane perpendicular to said horizontal shaft is pivotally and slidably connected to said second railway car on the same vertical axis as said vertical shaft of said male part in the manner defined in the instant claim 1 and in combination with other limitations of the claim. Therefore, claims 2-21, depending therefrom, are considered to be allowable.
